"America can't be the only nation that tells lies about itself to itself, can it? We tell the one about the East Coast, metropolitan and homogenous, all the time. Maybe if we only drive I-95, we fall for it.

But today I've seen farm villages, forests, Revolutionary-era churches with graveyards attached, summer towns, and beach resorts aging gracefully like frivolous maiden aunties. America is a giant buffet of Everything, and it's all-you-can-eat.

Now, if only the weather will stop trying to drown me."

...So is that NPR or Pacifica you're auditioning for, there? I like your Walter Cronkite delivery. g

Just returned from post-reading supper with my charming and erudite editor. And what do I find here?

You kids get off my lawn!
